

Love and Death.

I thought that in the deep grave you were lying,
O little love of mine!
Yet, through a lonely dawn when stars were dying,
I saw your dark eyes shine!

I thought, O little love, that you lay sleeping
Beneath the vaulted stone -
Yet even now I felt, with pulses leaping,
Your heart against my own!
