

Public Lecture Series 2003

The Irish Studies Centre

The main aim of the Irish Studies Centre is the promotion of Irish Studies as an academic area through research, teaching, documentation and community liaison. The focus of the teaching and research programme of the Centre is the political, social, cultural and economic changes in modern Ireland and the Irish diaspora.

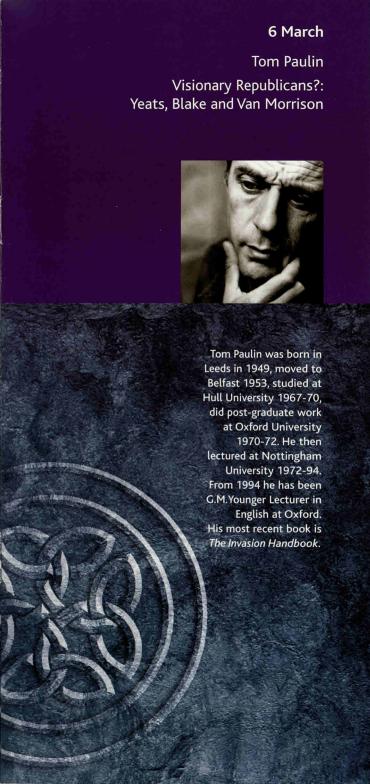

Current developments include:

In 2002 London Metropolitan University, in response to far-reaching political, economic, social, ideological and cultural changes in Europe, established the INSTITUTE FOR THE STUDY OF EUROPEAN TRANSFORMATIONS. Three existing research centres — the Irish Studies Centre, the London European Research Centre, the Ukraine Centre — and other scholars within the University have been brought together to launch an ambitious research programme. The main themes of the Institute's programme are:

- European integration and enlargement
- Migrations and immigrations
- Citizenship, allegiances, identities
- European global interactions
- Cultural and political representations

Thanks to our Sponsors

The Irish Studies Centre would like to extend its appreciation and gratitude to the The Charles Street Group for its support and sponsorship of the Public Lecture Series 2003.

27 March

Panel debate: The Good Friday Agreement Five Years On

The aim of this panel debate is to review how far we have come since the Good Friday Agreement was signed up to and where things may be in five years time.

Richard English

Richard English is Professor of Politics at Queen's University, Belfast.

Born in Belfast in 1963, his books include Ernie O'Malley: IRA Intellectual (1998), and Armed Struggle: The History of the IRA (2003). He has written widely on Irish politics and history, including work for the Times Literary Supplement, the Irish Times, Newsweek and the Times Higher Educational Supplement.

Fionnuala O'Connor

Fionnuala O Connor is a Belfast journalist who has written profiles of the main players in the peace process (Breaking the Bonds, Mainstream 2002), the shifts in Catholic political identity (In Search of a State, Blackstaff 1993), and the development of integrated education (A Shared Childhood, Blackstaff 2002).

Martin O'Brien

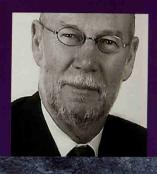

Martin O'Brien is 38 years old and is from Belfast. He has worked for the Committee on the Administration of Justice (CAJ) for the last 15 years. CAJ is a cross-community group of lawyers, academics and community activists working to secure the highest standards in the administration of justice in Northern Ireland. The Committee carries out research, publishes material, lobbies and campaigns for changes in the legal system and provides legal advice and assistance to people who feel that their rights have been violated.

Prior to working with the CAJ Martin was a student at Queen's University Belfast. He graduated from Queen's in 1987 with a degree in Sociology and Social Administration and was awarded a first class Master's degree in human rights law in 1996. In 1997 he was honoured by the Lawyers Committee for Human Rights alongside Mary Robinson, the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights and a number of other human rights activists from around the world. In June 1998 CAJ was awarded the prestigious Council of Europe Human Rights Prize in recognition of its contribution to the peace process in Northern Ireland

15 May

The Irish Ambassador Dáithí O'Ceallaigh

Ireland: A Changing Society

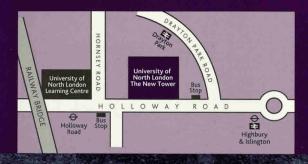

O'CEALLAIGH, Dáithí; Ambassador to the United Kingdom, Embassy of Ireland; born: 1945, Dublin, Ireland; Univ. Co., Dublin; career: Third Sec., Dept. of Foreign Affairs, 1973; First Sec., Dept. of Foreign Affairs, 1974; First Sec., Embassy of Ireland, Moscow, 1975; First Sec., Embassy of Ireland, London, 1977; First Sec., Anglo-Irish Division, Headquarters, 1982; Counsellor, Anglo-Irish Division, Headquarters, 1985; Counsellor, Anglo-Irish Secretariat, Maryfield, 1985; Consul General, New York, 1987: Ambassador, Finland and Estonia, 1993; Assistant Secretary, Administration Division, Headquarters, 1998; Second Secretary, Anglo-Irish Division, Headquarters, 2000; Ambassador to the United Kingdom 2001-;

Admission

The Public Lecture Series is open to any interested member of the public.

All lectures are FREE and commence at 7.30pm. Entrance is by registration only.

Venue

Henry Thomas Room New Tower London Metropolitan University 166-220 Holloway Road London N7 8DB

How to get here

By tube

Piccadilly Line: Holloway Road underground station is within 2 minutes walk of the New Tower.

By train

Highbury and Islington, Drayton Park

By bus

29, 43, 91, 153, 253, 259, 271, 279, N21, N29, N90, N92, N253

Registration

Thursday 6 March, Tom Paulin Please reserve seat(s) for me

Thursday 27 March, Panel Debate
Please reserve seat(s) for me

Please indicate how many seats you would like reserved for each date in the box provided (NB maximum 2 reservations per person).

	ay, The Irish Ambassador Dáithí O'Ceal
Please reserve	seat(s) for me
Name

laigh

Please complete this form, tear off, affix stamp and post to the address shown over.

For more information:

Address

Postcode

Telephone

Email

Telephone 020 7133 2913 Email: k.elsner@londonmet.ac.uk

