

June 15th 1939

P.J. Dunphy, Esq.,

Dear Mr. Dunphy,

I have fixed up for Mr. Armour to attend your meeting next Monday, 19th. June. Mr. W.S. Armour, to give him his full title, is the son of a Protestant minister who was well known for his National sympathies in the old days. He wrote a book about his father called "Armour of Ballymoney" which established his name as an author. Since then he has written "Facing the Irish Question" and "Ulster, Ireland, Britain." He was for seven years editor of the "Northern Whig", Belfast but was compelled to resign by the Unionists. He has a deep sympathy for the Catholics in the north of Ireland and will be able to make some illuminating remarks about their position today in the Six Counties. I am meeting him at 7.45 at Victoria Station on Monday and we should be down a little before eight.

Yours sincerely,

J.O. Barry-Walsh,
Organising Secretary.
